Report of the Secretary of Agriculture
on Administration of Section 20 of the
Federal Meat Inspection Act for 1979 Calendar Year

To assure U.S. consumers that imported meat and meat food products are wholesome, not adulterated, and truthfully labeled, the Food Safety and Quality Service (FSQS) of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) is vested with the responsibility for:

1. Evaluation of laws and regulations governing the meat inspection in foreign countries eligible to export meat and meat products to the United States to assure they are comparable with U.S. requirements.
2. On-site reviews of certified foreign plants preparing meat and meat products for export to the United States, and
3. Inspection of imported product at the time it is offered for entry into the United States.

I. FSQS FOREIGN PROGRAMS

The FSQS responsibility for imported meat products is carried out by the Foreign Programs Staff (FPS), Field Operations (FO), Meat and Poultry Inspection (MPI). This staff reviews and evaluates current regulatory comparability to determine the continued eligibility of foreign countries to export meat food products to the United States. The "on-site" reviews of foreign plants are conducted by 20 veterinarians. Eleven of these employees are stationed overseas--one each in Sydney and Melbourne, Australia; Wellington, New Zealand; Montevideo, Uruguay; San Jose, Costa Rica; Mexico City, Mexico; Ottawa, Canada; Copenhagen, Denmark; the Hague, Netherlands; Bonn, Germany (Federal Republic); and Vienna, Austria. The remaining reviewers are stationed in Washington, D.C., and travel to assigned countries on a planned review schedule. All of these positions are filled by veterinarians with considerable experience in the domestic meat inspection program.

Furthermore, the FPS, MPI, coordinates and reviews the activities of U.S. import and export inspectors. There are about 100 MPI, FO inspectors engaged in the inspection of imported meat at the points of entry into the United States. The FPS advises on import inspection procedures to insure nationwide uniformity and efficiency. Similarly, it provides guidance and staff expertise to the MPI, FO personnel and the industry on special inspection and certification requirements of importing countries, thus enabling U.S. meat and poultry producers and exporters to continue an export trade in the international sector.

The Foreign Programs Staff has made substantial contributions to assure that all meat and poultry products offered the U. S. consumer are safe and wholesome. To extend these contributions, the FSQS November 1979 Task Force Report on the Inspection of Imported Meat and Poultry recommended two ways in which the program might be strengthened. First, the report recommended that FSQS improve its capacity to evaluate the effectiveness of a foreign inspection system on a country-wide basis. Second, the report recommended that FSQS develop objective criteria to guide evaluation of foreign inspection systems and for determining the appropriate corrective actions triggered by these evaluations. During FY 1980, FSQS will implement program changes in response to the Task Force report. On-site foreign review will be structured around an objective evaluation protocol. Within an exporting country, the intensity of inplant reviews will be based on a demonstrated history of compliance with U. S. standards; sampling of plants is designed to support inferences about the quality of the country-wide inspection system. With regard to residue evaluation, an assessment of foreign agricultural practices (e.g., pesticides, antibiotics, and banned compounds) will be conducted and testing will be tailored to the specific residue risks of each country. The information from inplant and residue evaluations form a basis for successive levels of FSQS action towards a plant or country that is out of compliance.

II. OFFICIAL RECOGNITION OF COUNTRIES

Only those countries which have meat inspection systems with standards at least equal to those of the U.S. meat inspection program are permitted to ship meat to the United States. There were 46 such countries at the beginning of 1979. This number was reduced to 45 due to October 29 designation of the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands placing all its meat plants under USDA/FSQS inspection.

The following countries are eligible to export meat and meat products to the United States.

Argentina	Finland	Nicaragua
Australia	France	Northern Ireland
Austria	Germany (Federal Republic)	Norway
Belgium	Guatemala	Panama
Belize	Haiti	Paraguay
Brazil	Honduras	Poland
Bulgaria	Hungary	Romania
Canada	Iceland	Scotland
China (Republic of)	Ireland (Eire)	Spain
Colombia	Italy	Sweden
Costa Rica	Japan	Switzerland
Czechoslovakia	Luxembourg	Uruguay
Denmark	Mexico	Venezuela
Dominican Republic	Netherlands	Yugoslavia
El Salvador	New Zealand
England and Wales

While no formal report on poultry product imports is required by the Poultry Products Inspection Act, it should be noted that these imports are controlled under regulations virtually identical to those applied to the meat from livestock. Only limited quantities of poultry products, mainly specialty items are imported into the United States. Canada, France, Hong Kong and Israel are eligible to export poultry products to the United States.

III. INSPECTION AND COMPLIANCE

A. Foreign Inspection

There were 9,096 meat inspectors licensed by foreign countries to inspect meat and meat products prepared in foreign plants certified for export to the United States. This number varies from country to country, depending on the number of certified plants and the volume of U.S. imports from each country.

The number of inspectors in certified plants, by country, during calendar year 1979 was as follows:

Argentina	557	Hungary	58
Australia	1,939	Iceland	12
Belgium	22	Ireland	120
Belize	4	Italy	6
Brazil	402	Mexico	90
Bulgaria	16	Netherlands	505
Canada	1,270	New Zealand	1,400
China, Republic of	17	Nicaragua	44
Costa Rica	24	Panama	12
Czechoslovakia	23	Paraguay	22
Denmark	1,264	Poland	815
Dominican Republic	12	Romania	101
El Salvador	10	Sweden	2
France	38	Switzerland	11
Germany, Federal	18	Trust Territory of the
Republic		Pacific Islands	2
Guatemala	19	Uruguay	117
Haiti	5	Yugoslavia	98
Honduras	41

The inspection in certified plants is continuous during preparation of products destined for export to the United States, except for small-volume (nonslaughtering) processing operations controlled by patrol visits. Processing plants receiving patrol inspections use only products of animals slaughtered under continuous inspection.

B. Operations of Foreign Review

U.S. veterinarians review each foreign plant certified for the export of meat to the United States to insure compliance with the law. The frequency of foreign meat plant reviews is determined by the following factors: the plant size, nature and complexity of a foreign operation, and the anticipated volume of U.S. exports.

Plants exporting large volumes and other plants of special concern are reviewed at least four times annually. All other certified plants are reviewed at least once or twice a year. Subpart E, Part IV of this report, shows how these objectives were achieved.

Detailed schedules for review of foreign meat plants are arranged with the officials of the foreign government by the agricultural attaches at the United States embassies. For U.S. based reviewers this is done shortly before or after arrival in the country. All countries have been most cooperative in granting access to their plants at the time requested. No claim is made that the visits are unannounced, but the Foreign Programs Officers are trained to consider this factor when making evaluations. They conduct an independent, indepth survey of every feature requiring inspection in the foreign plant. In doing this, they check the same items that supervisory inspectors look for in U.S. plants.

For example, the U.S. veterinary reviewers insist on careful examination of the animals before and after slaughter, clean operating practices, sanitary maintenance and construction of facilities, necessary sampling for laboratory analysis, accurate labeling, inspectional controls over materials leaving and entering the plant, safe water supply, and effective supervision of inspectors. Reviewers are accompanied by representatives of the foreign inspection service, and the two parties have a free exchange of technical information.

Foreign Programs' Officers made 2,663 reviews of certified plants in 1979. The date of each review is reported with the listing of certified plants. Besides reviews to certified plants, the reviewers made 141 inspections of plants not authorized to export products to the United States. This data does not include the Director and Assistant Director of Foreign Programs Staff who made several supervisory visits to foreign plants.

C. Action on Adverse Findings

To achieve uniformity and to maintain control over the program, Foreign Programs Officers are not permitted to order changes or take definitive action until their findings have been evaluated by the Administrator, Food Safety and Quality Service. However, the Foreign Programs Staff is delegated authority to issue a product segregation order if, in the officers opinion, the administrator will probably remove the authority for a plant to export to the United States. In these cases, the foreign officials are asked to keep all product made after the time of the review separate and apart with the understanding that the segregated product cannot be exported to the United States if the plant is subsequently determined to be ineligible by the administrator. Similarly, if the reviewer questions the eligibility of categories of product to enter the United States, such products may be ordered held separate pending a Washington, D.C. headquarters decision on the matter. This action may be taken regardless of date of manufacture.

In addition to identification and rejection of ineligible plants and products, the Foreign Programs Staff continues to direct considerable attention to the correction of minor technical problems in foreign plants and systems. Although the nature of these findings at the time of the review did not warrant plant rejections, their prompt correction was made a requisite to continued export eligibility for the plants. In many cases the problem was caused by incomplete understanding by a foreign official of the application of U.S. technical requirements to a specific situation. Often there was a need to replace marginally acceptable facilities and practices with more modern equipment and better techniques.

On occasion, USDA officials suggested adjustments in the management practices of the inspection system to assure more effective and reliable performance. These changes often required considerable investment in plant rehabilitation costs and, in several countries, an increased allocation of funds to finance the inspection service. In practically all cases where sections of existing approved plants are remodeled, advanced design equipment was installed and newest manufacturing techniques were implemented. Among adjustments in the management practices of foreign inspection systems were improvements in staffing and other instructions, and the institution of improved inspection techniques and programs. USDA participation in negotiations and communications with the appropriate foreign governments insured that needed changes progressed at a satisfactory pace.

The action taken by the administrator when deficiencies are reported by U.S. officers depends both on the nature of the deficiencies and on the foreign government's response to them. If no health hazard is involved and the particular deficiency can and will be corrected in a short period of time, shipment of product is not interrupted. In case of serious deficiencies, or where previously requested corrections have not been made, the eligibility of the offending plant or plants to export products to the United States is removed. Similarly, if the administrator determines that the problem is systemwide, he may remove export authorization from all plants in a system, or if more appropriate, impose an embargo on products or classes of product from that country until USDA is convinced that U.S. standards are enforced.

The administrator informs the official of the foreign country in writing of the adverse findings, any restrictive action required by U.S. law, and conditions he has established for maintaining or restoring eligibility to export. With more familiarity with the U.S. programs, however, most foreign officials no longer wait for such formal notification before taking appropriate remedial action of their own.

IV. CERTIFICATION OF FOREIGN PLANTS

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE
FEDERAL MEAT INSPECTION ACT FOR 1979 CALENDAR YEAR

Pursuant to Subsection 20(e)(1) of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 620(e)(1)), I hereby certify that the foreign plants listed in this report have complied with requirements at least equal to all inspection, building construction standards, and all other provisions of the Federal Meat Inspection Act and regulations issued thereunder, and currently are approved to have their products imported into the United States (subject to comments in said listing).

Done at Washington, D.C., the first day of June, 1980.

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Ronald G. Houston". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Ronald" being the most prominent.

V. IMPORTED MEAT PRODUCTS

A. Inspection of Meat Products on Entry

A meat inspection certificate issued by the responsible official of the exporting country must accompany each shipment of meat offered for entry into the United States. The certificate identifies the product by origin, destination, shipping marks, and amounts. It certifies that the meat comes from animals that received veterinary ante-mortem and post-mortem inspection; that it is wholesome, not adulterated or misbranded; and that it is otherwise in compliance with U.S. requirements.

As a further check on the wholesomeness of the meat, U.S. inspectors at the port of entry inspect part of each shipment. To assure that a representative sample is selected, statistical sampling plans are applied to each lot of product to be inspected. The sampling plans and criteria for acceptance or rejection of imports are the same as those used for U.S. federally inspected meat. Samples of frozen products are defrosted prior to inspection. Import inspectors check the condition of canned meat containers and open sample cans for inspection of contents. Labels are verified for prior U.S. approval and the accuracy of stated net weights is checked. Specimens are routinely submitted to meat inspection laboratories to check compliance with compositional standards. Sample cans are also subjected to periods of incubation for signs of spoilage.

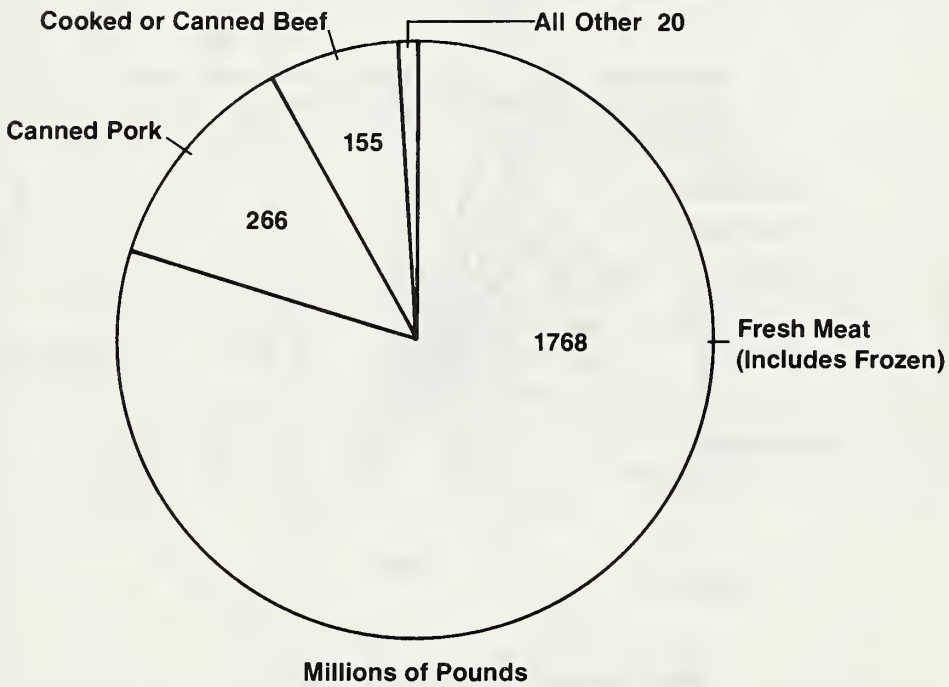

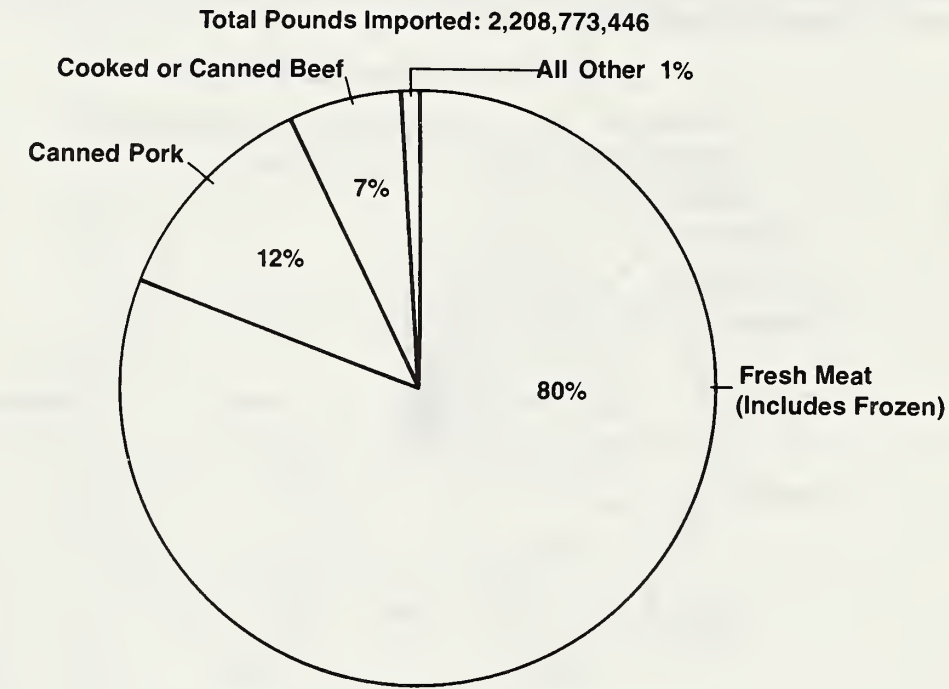

Meat imports are monitored for biological residues, such as pesticides, hormones, heavy metals, and antibiotics, by selection of representative samples for analysis by U.S. laboratories. Special control measures are in effect for handling of import meat in which excessive amounts of residues are detected. The procedures include refusing or withholding entry to product until results of laboratory analyses are received.

The computer based, automated Import Information System (IIS) has now successfully operated for one year. Port of entry product inspection and laboratory sampling histories are being maintained on a nationwide basis for all products proposed for entry from every eligible foreign establishment. The scope and extent of import inspection assignments issued to import inspectors through the IIS computer terminals located at the major ports are based upon the foreign establishment's cumulative compliance listing stored in IIS.

Inspectors assigned to import inspection have wide experience in the domestic program. As a further aid to the import inspectors, special schools are provided for additional training in this phase of inspection. The entire thrust of the program is for uniformity of import inspection and proper application of requirements to assure consumers that imported meats are as wholesome as domestic products.

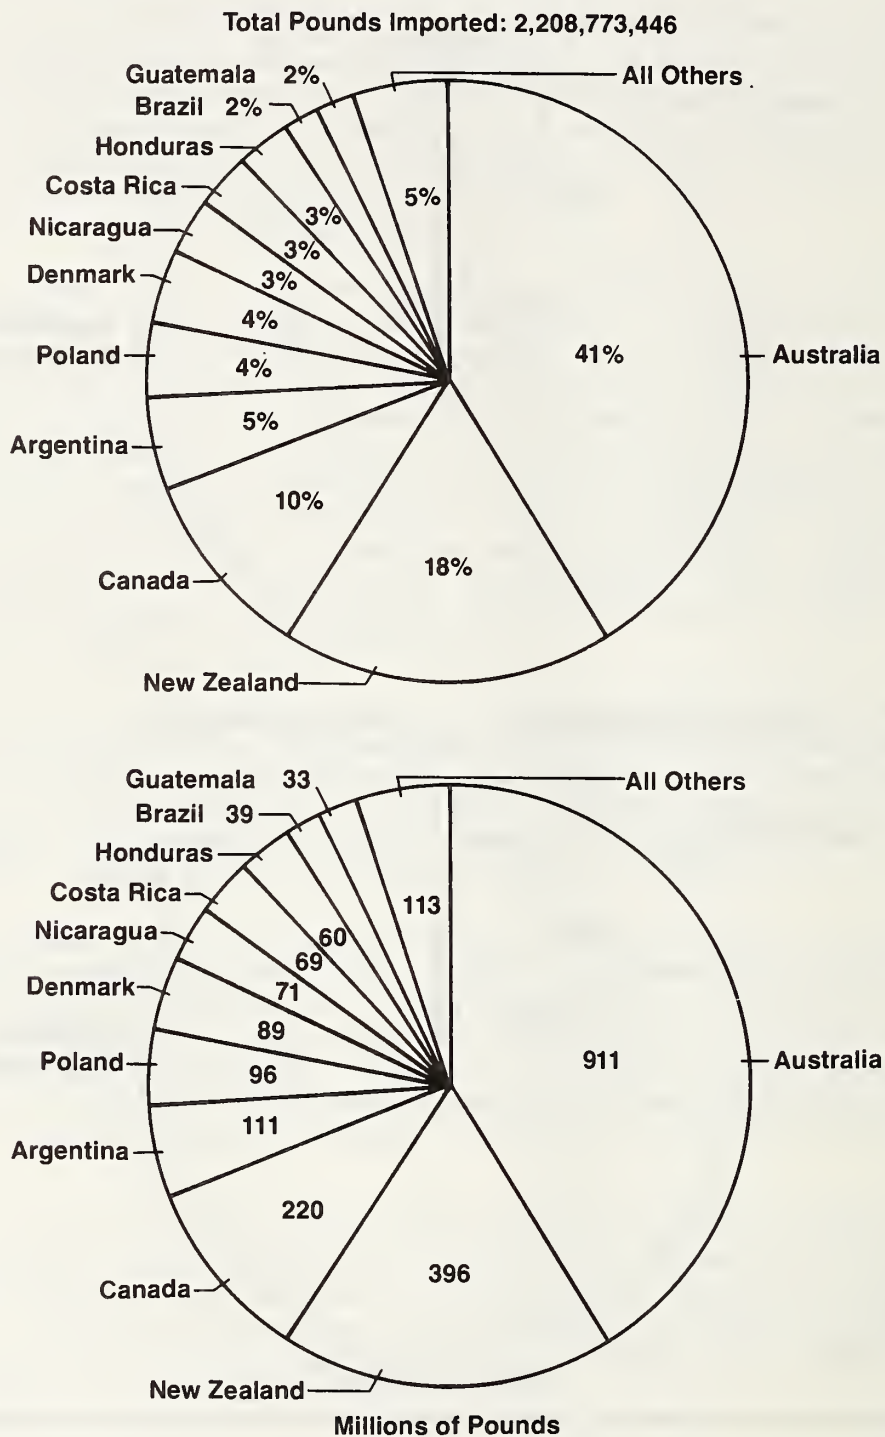

V. IMPORTED MEAT PRODUCTS

F. Product Rejection Breakdown by Reason for Rejection

Meat and poultry shipments found unacceptable during routine import inspection due to one or more observable defects are refused entry at the port. During 1979, adulteration with extraneous material was the principle defect found in fresh meat products.

In addition, shipments of meat and poultry products are sampled and subsequently tested for presence of biological residues. As a direct parallel to the FSQS domestic residue monitoring system, individual shipments of product are not required by regulation to be held pending laboratory test results. If a laboratory reports a residue violation on a monitoring sample, efforts are made to locate any part of the shipment that may have already entered commercial channels. Product recovered through these efforts is then returned to the owner and is refused entry.

During 1979, 3,561 routine residue monitoring samples were collected and submitted for laboratory analysis. Of these, 41 samples were found to contain violative levels of biological residues. These violative samples were drawn from import shipments totaling 6,230,364 pounds. FSQS was successful in refusing entry on 4,510,282 pounds located in various port storage facilities. The remaining 1,720,082 pounds of product had moved into commercial distribution and, consequently, could not be traced.

Other defects for each product type are listed below in order of their frequency as recorded during inspection.

Type of Imported Product and Reasons for Rejection

Fresh Beef and Veal

1. Adulteration with hair, bone and extraneous material
2. Bruises and blood clots
3. Ingesta
4. Pathological lesions
5. Decomposition
6. Biological residues

Fresh Mutton and Lamb

1. Adulteration with wool, bone and extraneous material
2. Pathological lesions
3. Ingesta
4. Bruises
5. Biological residues

Canned Beef

1. Unsound cans (flippers, springs, swellers, damaged seams)
2. Short weight
3. Adulteration with extraneous material
4. Noncompliance with standards of composition
5. Biological residues

Canned Pork and Canned Other

1. Unsound cans
2. Adulteration with extraneous material
3. Short weight
4. Failure to meet composition standards
5. Undercooked
6. Biological residues

Cooked Beef

1. Insufficiently cooked (quarantine violation from foot-and-mouth infected countries)
2. Adulteration with extraneous material
3. Decomposition
4. Biological residues

Horsemeat (Fresh and Canned)

1. Adulteration with extraneous material
2. Noncompliance with standards
3. Container defects
4. Pathological lesions
5. Decomposition
6. Labeling marking
7. Biological residues
